

Love in Tao

Life is an interesting Journey — to some, it's a long, long and painful one; while to others, it's rather a short and happy one.

I cannot speak for anyone else's experience but mine for I've learned something throughout my own journey. For the past eighteen thousand days, there were ups and downs, joyous and sadness and a whole lot of feelings in my life that I could not really put in words for you to understand. However, I do know that there must be a reason or some purposes for me to be here on earth.

Rock-N-Roll is part of my youth life and I still play the music in my leisure time. I love reading and I am very fond of numbers because I am a mathematician. Besides the work I do, I enjoy editing articles and getting to learn more about the ancient Chinese's philosophy — Tao Te Ching taught by Chinese sage Lao Tzi.

He had tried to guide us in finding the unity of heaven and human (or Tao) by the teachings of the book — Tao Te Ching. Many people get confused by the core concept of "the non-action" in Lao Tzi's book and instead of digging into the truth behind it, they laugh at him and think he's a crazy fellow then walk away from the path that might guide us through the ultimate meaning of human life.

To protect the environment and respect lives, I chose to be a vegetarian some fifty hundred days ago. I love being a vegetarian and care very much about the well-being of the place we live upon — earth. Without her, there won't even be us. Yet, very few people would realize that.

I met my soul mate fourteen hundred and sixty days ago at the I-Ching class taught by Master Henry Chang. She has a very nice and kind heart and always welcomes friends in her house. Believe it or not, I spent the most memorable day of my life at her house for the Chinese New Year Eve. With artistry background, she has a beautiful voice when sings the Italian Opera and a pair of fine hands in playing piano. With so many talents, she is a very beautiful woman. I've learned a great deal of what Tao is during the course of her companionship. She is my best friend and Chinese teacher. Without her, I won't even be able to recite the Heart Sutra in Chinese and to meet with so many marvelous people who are more concern of others than oneself.

This is the fourteen days prior our wedding banquet and I must say I'm the happiest, luckiest groom in the entire universe because we are tying the knot and will go through our journey together.

From now on, I'd always cherish what heaven has given upon us and be a truthful husband and Tao practitioner who can connect people who have deep affinity with Tao.

My friends, our new life together has just begun because of Tao. Why don't you join us and find the true love in Tao? We could share so much experience and discuss how wonderful Tao is and can be if love in Tao.
